

DIAMOND

The Diamond is one of the largest panel van conversions available, giving the benefits of a coachbuilt motorhome within a rigid steel body with large doors and a more manageable overall width.

The Diamond's two room layout provides accommodation for a family of four with a privacy screen in the middle, separating the large rear double bed from the two front singles. The rear can be specified as a "U" shaped lounge or a fixed bed with storage underneath, and the front can comprise either a settee with one belted travelling seat, or two travelling seats.

The shower and toilet are in the centre of the van, and are equipped with a fixed handbasin with a mirrored vanity cupboard above and a storage cupboard underneath. Next door is the ample wardrobe.

Opposite there is the large kitchen with a stainless steel domestic type slot in oven, matching sink with drainer and glass lid and a useful amount of workspace. Underneath is the fridge, cutlery drawer and more cupboard space.

In the cab the passenger seat swivels to create a dining area in the front to complement the one in the rear lounge.

The Iveco is an immensely robust base vehicle and is available with a large number of sensibly priced options, including increased gross vehicle weight. Its rear wheel drive, separate chassis and twin axle option means it can be specified as a particularly suitable tow vehicle. Devon offer a very competitively priced designer option pack which means the Diamond can be supplied to a much higher specification than is normally available for a motorhome.
